Georgia, looks elegant but a bit thicker and more readable than Times New Roman.

A serif font features strokes at the end of the letterforms. These strokes are referred to as "serifs."

A sans-serif font does not have strokes at the end of its letterforms. Sans-serif fonts have a more modern appearance.

Verdana: looks clean bolded as well. Not to overwhelming or in your face. This is important since I want headings to be bolded so they can stand out more

I like the look of serif fonts more in general, however I noticed most web apps have sans-serif fonts. It does look a bit cleaner and more readable without the extra serifs though

Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet.

Stadarized font sizes:

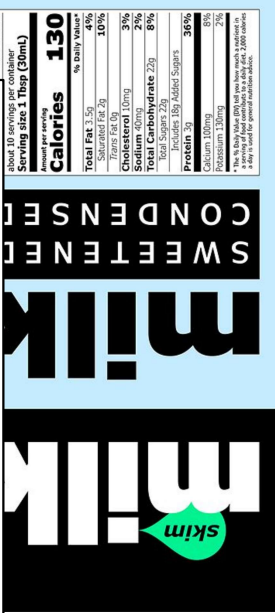

S: 13px

M: 15px

XL: 38px

Verdana: similar to Ariel since it's also asans-serif font. However, the letters looks wider and easier to read
